The office has large windows overlooking a city skyline, with the Empire State Building prominently visible. A white table and a white chair are also visible in the scene.

Centaur Introduces a More Durable Flooring Surface

Designed to meet the demands of today's high-pace, 24/7 culture, the Eight Collection from Bolon features modular floor tiles manufactured to outwear other tiles available on the market today.

New production technology gives Bolon's Eight flooring collection a smoother, more durable surface, making it perfectly adaptable to a host of high traffic applications. The collection consists of eight models in four natural base colors. The collection, which takes its names from the capital cities of the world, includes New York, London, Paris, Milan, Moscow, Tokyo, Sydney and Stockholm.

Half of the eight models are striped and are named Eight A.M. And half are solid and have been named Eight P.M. The new flooring collection meets the highest standard for flooring durability. It is also fire resistant and provides acoustical advantages.

The easy to clean collection is manufactured using a new production technique that provides a smoother surface. The material is also more environmentally responsible. The company says it uses vinyl because it is made largely of salt. During manufacture, the vinyl is combined with other substances, such as calcium carbonate, which, like salt, is a renewable resource. The material is 100% recyclable. The flooring is marketed in the fitness and recreation market by Centaur Floor Systems LLC.
